«Our work has meaning only if it is a faithful witness of its era»

From a family of architects passionate about design and contemporary creations, Jean-Philippe Nuel graduated as an architect from the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris and quickly made a name for himself by winning several competitions, including an international competition presided over by Kenzo Tange.

Very quickly, before turning 30, he had designed a hotel in Paris, its architecture and interior decoration, which would orientate his work towards this sector of activity.

Following this first hotel project, subsequent projects for boutique hotels followed in Paris (Le Lavoisier, Le Général, Le Duo and more recently the Le Cinq Codet) and elsewhere in France (Le Canberra in Cannes, the Avenue Lodge in Val d'Isère, Le Grand Balcon in Toulouse, or the Jiva Hill Park Hotel near Geneva).

Subsequently the major chains have commissioned him for the interior decoration of hotels in France and around the world (Japan, China, India, Malta, Morocco ...): Accor (Pullman/ M'Gallery, Sofitel), Club Med, Hilton, Radisson, Starwood (Le Méridien / Sheraton), Marriott (Renaissance/ Autograph), IHG (Intercontinental/ Indigo).

In today's hotel business, Jean-Philippe Nuel is a name associated with luxury interior design.
